From the Editor's Desk: the final words...

Piotr Przychodzki

This year Lambda experienced an unprecedented amount of growth and development. We experienced record recruitment, record financial success and we printed the highest number of editions with the most content. The content went through a serious diversification process to include the French

This was the year that we broke the geographical isolation of the off-campus by distribution right to the city.

There were largest delegations sent to the regional and national conferences and there was the largest number of seminars presented to the staff and student body.

We had almost twice as many meetings as the SGA (we get fractions of their honorarium) and the revision of the constitution as well as an entirely brand new policy manual is left for posterity. We shocked our fellow CUP (Canadian University Press) members and the local media just continues quoting, interviewing and reading our content. All of that has not been an accident but a conscious effort on our part to make this year the most influential in the almost since the first year of publishing 31 years ago. We have been so much better that we inspired competition. I can only be proud to be a part of this team as well as its accomplishments. The highest form of a compliment, of course, were the three imitations printed under the private name of La Parabla Escrita.

Lambda has never had as much of a student, faculty and administration involvement as this year. The fact that we worked very closely with the Status of Women Committee and Norma Macrae-Ward resulted in the printing of most Women's Issues content on Lambda pages.

And here is where I would like to start giving credit to the people involved. All the elected staff (The largest group of volunteers to ever work within Lambda). Thank you for the highest degree of patience and professionalism under the immense pressure of overwork and under payment. You have been the most diverse group of individuals that made this organization unpredictable and plain. I would like also thank the members of the staff and casual contributors. They have given us enough material to start preparing Lambda for printing twice a week.

We were also given immense support from the president Ross Paul, Paddy Blenkinsop, Norma Macrae-Ward, Manon Lemond, Alex MacGregor, Susan Dobra, and Mark Green. The Language Centre has also given a very brave attempt in improving the content.

The individuals that have been outstanding in their influence have been Mark Denis and Tim Kelly, the only true journalists on staff; Janice Savage, Dominic Vidmar, Jamie Armstrong, Glen(n) Scott, Carine Schlup; the production elves, Jason Leach and Hilton Leung. Last and not least, Marlene Sammon the financial backbone of the organizations she brought from the operational dark age to the fifth generation computerization.

I would also like thank Dorthy and Jim Sammon, Mr. Mrozewski, David Case, Darren Nickel and family and My Family for support and accepting the pressures that this job requires.

Collectively the experience of the past year has given me an insight to my talents on a scale most individuals don't ever experience. As such, it has shaped the rest of my life. I have made some friends and some enemies, all and all a sign of success. Thank you all.

I also welcome next years staff to carry on the work we started. You are the most competent and best prepared for the challenge of transition to twice a week publishing, nothing less will be worthy of your skills and talents.

To the critics of Lambda and it's staff, when you criticize make sure you have a solution as well. Otherwise you're just wasting everyone's time!

CRO's Remarks

Well, what a month it's been. For the past few weeks the papers have been filled with all kinds of commentary related to the election and how it was run. Traditionally I don't like to get involved in debates through editorials but I feel obliged to respond to some of the accusations made recently. The reason for my silence until now has been my desire to remain quiet until the completion of the elections. Well the elections are done and now I can clear a few things up.

Mr. Chapelle has made some interesting comments about the election and how I conducted them. I wish to state that the elections were run according to the constitution and bylaws of the SGA. When this process was developed, it was considered the best system available in terms of costs and elector convenience. If the procedure was a "Farce", as Simon claims, it was within his mandate to change these covenants to improve the system. Also if the process did not work how did he get caught. I would also like to clarify that he was CAUGHT voting twice and did not volunteer the information as he states. It was a truly unfortunate situation and it was with great regret that Mr. Chapelle was disqualified. I would have been avoiding my responsibilities if I had not dealt with the situation. Contrary to the opinions of some, the decision to disqualify Mr. Chapelle was based purely upon the facts, he voted twice. The decision was not driven by a personal bias, but on the contrary, my opinions of Mr. Chapelle's abilities made the decision all the tougher to make. My own opinions may have changed over the past weeks though it did not affect my judgment. I could continue with the rebuttal, but both time and space is limited not to mention that none of the claims have any basis of fact.

I now must turn my attention to some outlandish claims made by Mr. Chapelle. The reason for the number of U.C. poll clerks hired comes from one and one only. Those who applied got the jobs. Notification was placed in LAMBDA in the SGA office and announced at the SGA board. Of the 25 people who gave their names to the SGA office, 19 were employed. The 6 who were not given jobs did not get them due to schedule conflicts or I was unable to get in touch with them. As for "Mark's Girlfriend" who I have been told, has a name, she was paid for the number of hours that she worked and nothing more.

It is truly humorous to the extent that Mr. Chapelle has painted himself the victim of the whole situation. Through an attempt to cloud the issue with the pointing of fingers as well as promising better things in the future, he avoids the facts. He broke the constitution and bylaws that he was elected to uphold. PERIOD! The incident is cut and dry; black and white, he broke the rules and paid the price. The situation is clear, you broke the rules, now accept the consequences like a responsible politician and not in the unprofessional (childish?) manner that you have done.

On to more pertinent topics. To both Heather and Ian, I extend to both of you my thanks and admiration for the professional manner with which you conducted your campaigns. Heather, congratulations and good luck in the coming year. You have many things to change in the constitution and bylaws and a busy year awaits you. Ian, I hope that this is not the last the SGA will see of you, as far as I know there is to be a Presidential by-election soon, I hope you name will be on the ballot.

In closing, I would like to thank LAMBDA for their assistance in the election, through the holding of deadlines and the professionalism of Jose Barnes' article. I hope that this election will cause more people to become involved with the SGA. I remind all of you that the SGA can only be as strong as the membership therefore it is up to YOU! Once again good luck to next years executives.

Investigation Launched into 99¢ Shooter Incident

by Andy McKillican
Staff Writer

Reports of an incident regarding a patron at the Laurentian University Pub have the Pub Committee launching an investigation. The incident was brought to the attention of authorities by a letter published in Lambda describing the incident.

The letter suggested that a patron of the Pub had consumed 20-30 shooters in the space of approximately one hour. She left the Pub and collapsed on her way home. She then had to be carried by a fellow student. She was taken to the hospital where she was treated for alcohol poisoning.

The night of the incident, $99 was being charged for shooters. That is the base price that the Pub may charge for shooters under its license. The price may be increased to $2.95 if more staff are required or entertainment is provided on any given night.

Marv Martin, Assistant

Manager of the Pub, suggested that there were more than 30 people in the Pub that night, contrary to the letter. He also recognized that two security staff work at the door of the Pub. He stated that on the night in question, "Everyone walked out of there on their own accord." This was not the first evening the Pub had sold $99 shooters. "We ran it two or three months without incident," said Martin.

The Pub Committee has set up an inquiry to investigate the matter. Paddy Blenkinsop, Member of the Pub Committee, said "We don't quite know what the incident was." Marv Martin said, "If the incident did happen, we're doing something wrong." However, he would not comment on what action would be taken by the Pub Committee as the patron has yet to come forward. He commented that the Pub is concerned about the incident, "We're always concerned, if somebody leaves here, they are a bit tipsy, they get home okay."

The President's 'lackluster' performance was said to be disappointing considering his $10,000 honorarium.

A Call For More Native Lawyers

Michael Eshkibok
Ojibway Writer

If Native people were to have the same proportion of lawyers in their population that mainstream Canadian Society has, then there would be between 100-1700 Native lawyers. A recent report suggests that the Native population is under-represented in the legal profession. In fact, there are only about 10 Native lawyers in Canada, any way you want to cut it.

It would be unreasonable to expect that without greater presence in law (and other powerful institutions in society) that Native people would be capable of affecting legislation, and the attitudes of the academic and legal professions. Without more legal representation from the Native community, legal obstacles will be very difficult to overcome. If Native people are to be represented on the Supreme Court, they must have more Native lawyers and judges from which to choose from. In the meantime, there is no reason to believe that one will be appointed, although there are several outstanding Natives who could probably qualify for the job. Those who have gained prominence lately are; Murray Sinclair, Manitoba Provincial Court Judge, Ovide Mercredi, Assembly of First Nations, and Roberta Jamieson former Ontario Ombudsman/woman.

Judges are usually politically appointed by the party in power and the membership lists of these parties contain relatively few Native names.

The handful of Native lawyers I know are bright and hard working people. They do really want to help their people but they are hampered by the system, which really doesn't acknowledge their right to be themselves. Lawyers with a western bias have shaped Canadian laws which is why these laws haven't worked well for Native people.

Although the right to self-determination is at a temporary lull officially, the drive to run our own lives will never cease because Native people have the right to run their own lives. To be denied what is rightfully ours is wrong. Taking over areas of jurisdiction that concern us undoubtedly will require Native legal representation from our point of view.

One change that has been suggested is a tribal court system.

Tribal courts work in the United States, why can't they work here?

Even the Canadian Bar Association is in support of a separate justice system for Native people.

As Leory Littlebear, an Albertan lawyer and Native Studies professor said, "We are different and don't underestimate the differences we have."

The sweeping $2.5 million, 3 year Aboriginal Justice Inquiry in Manitoba described Canada's legal treatment of aboriginal people as "an international disgrace." The report said a separate justice system was the key to alleviating hundreds of years of mistreatment in a white man's justice system.

Although Native lawyers do study the white man's legal system, there is no reason why they could not be involved in conflict resolution using their traditional values and principles. This includes the Medicine Wheel.

What we need is people who understand Indian laws and ways of resolving problems. What we really want is recognition of our rights.

Manitoba Lawyer, Ovide Mercredi

The UFO Myth?

By Derek Chezzi
Contributor

We have all seen or heard about movies or read books that deal with unidentified flying objects or extra-terrestrials. From Close Encounters of the Third Kind and Star Trek to Communion and Intruders, the thought of alien life forms tantalizes the curious. People have had a fascination with the mystery of life on other planets for quite some time. When Orson Wells' War of the Worlds was broadcast, terror seemed to grip the population. Today, people are not as easily persuaded into believing stories of ghost and Martian invasions. However, the fact remains that many people do believe in extra-terrestrials. Even some scientists acknowledge the fact that someday we could come into contact with beings in another part of this incredibly vast universe.

Yet, some people today believe that humans are presently being observed, and even abducted, by aliens. Could this be true? Absolutely claims Michel Deschamps, UFOlogist. He started gathering information about UFO and abduction cases nearly 15 years ago. One wonders, what would possess someone to take up the study of UFO phenomenon? "Basically the fact that there was something there that was unexplained and nobody else was looking into it," says Deschamps. But 15 years of ridicule and practical jokes will not deter Michel from his interest. What started as a hobby has grown into what could be considered a full-time job. He was recently appointed Provincial Section Director of Northern Ontario for MUFON, an organization that investigates reports involving unidentified objects. To bad no salary comes with the title.

Regardless of the number of reports, there will always be the skeptics. Reputed debunkers of UFO sightings have come up with many conjectures. Everything from hallucinations to tectonic plate movements have been cited as the cause of these sightings. When asked about the latter theory, Deschamps exclaimed "This is absolute bull. The person or persons that have come up with this theory have no idea what UFO are about." He himself has seen a UFO next to Regional Road 80 — affectionately dubbed 'Radar Road'. On October 9, 1990, between 8:30 and 9:05 PM, a 40 foot craft apparently landed or rather hovered above the ground very close to the now defunct Radar Base. "My knees were shaking," Michel says. But he toughed it out, observing the event for the 35 minutes.

However, Deschamps is not the only one to have seen a UFO in the Sudbury region. On Tuesday, January 23rd, 1968, Laurentian students had taken a photograph of what is believed to be a UFO. Also, some people that worked at INCO in the late sixties could tell you stories about UFO sightings over the city. But lately, questions dealing with the circle mystery seem popular. Overnight, mysterious circles appearing in farmers' fields. The bent crops are undamaged and continue to grow normally. According to Deschamps, crop circles have a link with UFO, but there is no proof to accompany the hypothesis. Nevertheless, Deschamps thinks that the day will soon arrive when humans will finally understand the mystery of UFO. Numerous daylight sightings of these objects flying in the sky have been reported in Mexico City. Around 3000 years ago, it was predicted that after the sixth new sun, namely the 1990 solar eclipse, these sightings would occur. Closer to home, for the past few weeks, a Mennonite community, between Huntsville and Gravenhurst, have reported sightings at 2 am on a daily basis. It seems that the age of enlightenment is upon us.

This may seem a little disturbing to some; others will simply scoff at the allegations. Regardless, the truth remains that something is there, and often it is inexplicable. To the uncertain I leave only these words: Keep looking skyward, you never know what you may find!

Parent-owned student houses still offers financial benefits

By Kevyn Nightingale, CA

(MC) — During the real estate boom of the 1980s, some parents of university-bound students invested in more than their children's education—they also invested in a home away from home which their daughter or son could live. Rather than seeing four years of rent go out the window, the logic went, why not buy a home, have the child share it with fellow students who would pay rent and then sell the home at a profit?

Since real estate markets in Toronto, Montreal and many western communities have fallen dramatically, parents wonder whether this strategy still pays. The answer is that, in some cases, it can.

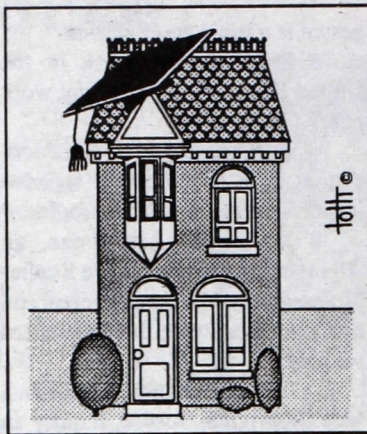

Significant appreciation in the housing market isn't expected for at least three years. That means that if you have to take out a large mortgage to purchase a home near your child's university, or if you can't carry the home for a long time (well beyond your child's four years of school), then it's probably a poor investment in today's climate.

However, if you have plenty of 'patient' cash to invest, and don't have to worry about how you'll meet mortgage payments if you are temporarily short a few students, there are both practical and tax advantages to buying a home which your daughter or son would inhabit. For example, you will likely feel your investment is in good hands if your child acts as on-site property manager. At the same time, the child learns the property management business.

If you pay your child to administer the property you will lower your rental income, thus saving you tax. Your child's income will rise, but since he or she is likely to have low earnings and also has tuition and education credits, he or she will probably pay little or no tax.

In the first few years that rental property is owned, it usually runs at a loss, particularly when interest rates are high. As long as you have a reasonable expectation that the property eventually will generate a profit, you can deduct the rental loss and reduce the tax you pay on your other employment or business income. Since there are rules and limitations on deductions—for example, expenses related to the accommodation of your own child cannot be deducted—consult a professional advisor before purchasing the home. Also, bear in mind that the capital gains exemption does not apply to real estate purchased after February 1992.

If you have the financial wherewithal to withstand the ups and downs of the real estate market for 10 years, you will likely make money on your housing investment. If you can last 20 years, the returns are all but guaranteed.

Lifeguard Can't Save Their Jobs

by A.H.

Several L.U. student's presently employed at the Laurentian University Olympic Gold pool look as if they are out of luck for summer jobs this summer.

The reason is uncertain however some staff feel it is due to their lack of residence in Sudbury. It also appears to these people that their experience is being overlooked.

Cathy Jerome presently employed at the pool is the most qualified lifeguard on staff unfortunately she is being refused a job at the pool this summer. She feels it is unfair that she should lose her seniority to high school students who have not worked at the pool or have lower qualifications.

Jerome is the only student available to teach high level courses such as Nation Life Saving, Leaders, and CPR instructors. The courses she is teaching to other university and high school students, are the very courses they will use to bump her out of a job this summer.

This system of hiring and firing headed by the pool director, Ron Larwood, seems very unfair and unjust. It seems like common sense to hire the person who is best qualified, especially in the case where the job involves the safety and lives of people.

Chris Renaud, another staff member who has worked at the pool for the past three years finds himself in a similar situation. Renaud has not only worked at the pool for three years but has also headed the University Lifeguard team at the Provincial Lifeguard Championships for the past two years. This team took home a silver medal last year and placed fourth this year.

In an interview Jerome stated that "For two summers now I have endured this frustrating process of working at Laurentian then losing my job seniority at my previous job in Burlington. In turn I have to settle for lower paying jobs, despite my experience."

The pool claims that due to cutbacks in certain programs offered at the University there are less jobs to offer. However the jobs that are open are going to students from other universities and surrounding high schools, who have less qualifications and who live in Sudbury.

The students basically want to know why this has happened and why Laurentian can not change its policy to follow the same policy as every other pool in Ontario.

A statement made by one of the lifeguards seemed to sum up the feelings of the group, "If students who do not go to Laurentian are more desirable then the people who make this school, then why are they not the ones who teach the courses now, and I am I just a cheap replacement?"

Attention to: *Dean Roberge!

The following commerce students would like your justification for the proposed budget cut of $145,000 (5.3%) to the Commerce Faculty. Please include how other professional schools such as Social Work only have a budget cut of $16,000 (1/2 %)!
* Dean Roberge is also a member of the Faculty of Social Work. These ill-advised and inappropriate actions will not be tolerated.

The Crack

The door flew open. 'What a shitty day,' thought Percy as he stomped into his apartment. 'What an utterly fucked-up day!' He dropped the grocery bags on the floor and flopped down on the dusty couch. Running his hands through his greasy hair, he surveyed the dingy dump he called home. A gray damp bachelor apartment with a rattling fridge, broken hot plate, black and white TV that only received the local Spanish station and a squeaky bed was home for Percy Goodfellow, Temp Extraordinaire. The only thing breaking up the blocky monotony of the place was the huge closet in one corner near the bed.

With a sigh of resignation, Percy got up and picked up his groceries. In the 'kitchen' as he went through his bags, he reviewed his day. He first dropped his herbal tea in the elevator on the Gucci shoes of his (unknown at the time) new boss, got lost trying to find the office and thus was late for his new assignment. This was to be a small sample of what was in store for the rest of the day: messed up and unmailed letters, people cut off the line instead of put on hold, no lunch or break and then the cancellation of the assignment. It's not like Percy was independently wealthy and was slum-ming. He needed the jobs the agency was sending him to but this last cancellation just might prove to be his last.

'Fuck it,' Percy said out loud to no one in particular. Something was bound to change; his life couldn't stay on the same shit loop it was on forever. Maybe later, he would go visit Wendy, the love of his life that lived upstairs. The fact that she lived with her Neanderthal, steroid-popping boyfriend and that Wendy saw Percy as more of a puppy-dog acquaintance than a friend was immaterial. Walking into the bathroom, he smiled. He knew that one day, the goddess upstairs would see the error of her ways and come running to him. 'Then you'll be mine, baby!'

Percy chuckled as he squeezed his zits. He seemed to be getting more and more of those every day. They spread like wildfire despite the shit he kept putting on them. He'll have to complain to his doctor next week when he would go in for his monthly check-up.

A knock at the door brought Percy out of his reverie. 'Who is it?' he yelled, not really wanting to stop his grooming because he had finally found the big juicy zit and was successfully squeezing the shit out of it.

'-It's Wendy, Percy. I wanted to borrow some strawberry jam.'

Grabbing a dirty facecloth, Percy ran to the door and quickly gave his zits a rub down before opening the door. There she was, the Upstairs Goddess herself dressed in as little as possible. It was amazing how excited he could get with her simply standing there.

'-Hi Wendy,' Percy whined. 'How are you? Do you want to come in?'

'-No. I just wanted to borrow some strawberry jam. Skip and I are spending a nice, quiet, romantic night at home. You know how it is, Percy-Wercy.'

When Wendy giggled and giggled like that, Percy could refuse her nothing.

'-Uh, sure Wendy. Is that all you wanted?', he asked, hoping for a negative answer as he came back from the kitchen with the jam.

'-That's all. Thanks sweetie.'

Percy watched as she bounced up the stairs. One day, he wistfully thought, she will be mine.

and commentary, Percy went to bed. He might as well try to get a good night sleep if tomorrow was going to be any better than today. He slumped into bed and pulled the ratty covers over himself. He wasn't really going to sleep yet, he still had his glasses on. As he lay there staring at the ceiling, the sounds from upstairs began. Squeak, squeak, bang, bang, bang. Oh-my-Gods were as clear as anything as well as the grunts and thrusts shaking the upstairs bed.

Not again. Not tonight,' Percy thought with disgust. That monster is having his way with my woman. He flopped around on the bed, trying to get comfortable and not to listen to the noises. Laying there, plotting some kind of evil revenge on Skip, Percy glanced over at the open closet and then looked again. There was a damn crack in the ceiling. Of all the... Now, he would have to call the landlord to come in and fix the stupid thing. Maybe the lovebirds upstairs were about to come down into his apartment via the ceiling. Wouldn't that be a hoot. With that happy thought, he fell asleep and dreamt of cracks in the ceiling.

Later that evening, after watching the Spanish news

So today I have part of a story I'm working on. The characters in this story are exclusive residents of my imagination. Any likeness to anyone living or dead is purely accidental

The Nowhere Man

This is a story of a man named McLeod. Now this man's life started as all do. He was born of the union between man and woman. Was nursed, and grew both physically and mentally. He attended school, felt all the joys of childhood and blew out candles on his birthday. His life progressed as time did pass, but all of that is forgotten now. Flashes of light on merry-go-rounds and cool watermelons on hot days are lost. All there is now is a shell of a man, McLeod, and the place he keeps.

He opens his eyes after a night of restlessness in the summer heat. Blinking his eyes quickly the water stained roof of his dingy apartment comes into focus. Outside cars whiz by in the bright sunlight. McLeod guesses that it's early afternoon, though he's not really sure. He has no clock or no watch. A day is simply a day, measures by the actions of others. A day really only mattered when it was time to get a check and when he needed to get his poison.

He sat up in bed and was immediately hit with a chorus line of aching muscles and a headache. The instances of the previous night came swimming back to him. The rye, the hash. He had done it good last night. The 26er lay discarded empty on the floor. The ashtray on the coffee-table contained the butts of at least half a pack of cigarettes and four roaches. McLeod smiled to himself despite his screaming head. He was satisfied; at least for the moment.

He got out of bed to piss and to turn on the small black and white television that sat on a chair at the end of his bed.

The bathroom stank more than usual this morning. As he aimed directly into the center of the bowl he noticed vomit splashed all down the side of the porcelain. It must have been him, but he couldn't remember. Actually, he'd been doing that a lot lately. As the toilet flushed the last of last night's rye down into the sewer the phone rang.

"Hello," McLeod said through a groggy-cracked voice.

"Hey man, you sound like shit," came back the voice at the other end.

"Ya man it was a rough one. So is it comin in or what?"

"Hey man, just like I told ya. My brother Duey went down to Montreal with this guy, Sean. They left yesterday man, so they're due back sometime today."

"O.K. man call me when it's happening."

"O.K. man Later."

He put down the receiver and absently scratched his nuts which hadn't been washed for about three days. New priorities were now consuming his mind. He walked over to the night table and pulled open its only drawer. Inside sat a couple of twenties and a whole pile of change. That would buy him some smoke but he would have to make sure to watch what he spends. His next welfare check wasn't coming in until sometime next week.

He went over and again sat down on his bed. The TV was on CTV and some cheap-Canadian-Donahue-type show was on. Sometimes he wished he had cable but he didn't want to pay for it, and there was no one in the building to steal it off of.

"On today's show Shirley features, 'Women who were born in the body of a man'... 'Hello everyone and welcome to today's show. We have six women with us today who all have the same problem; they were born men. Now let's start with Ricki. Now Ricki can you tell us...."

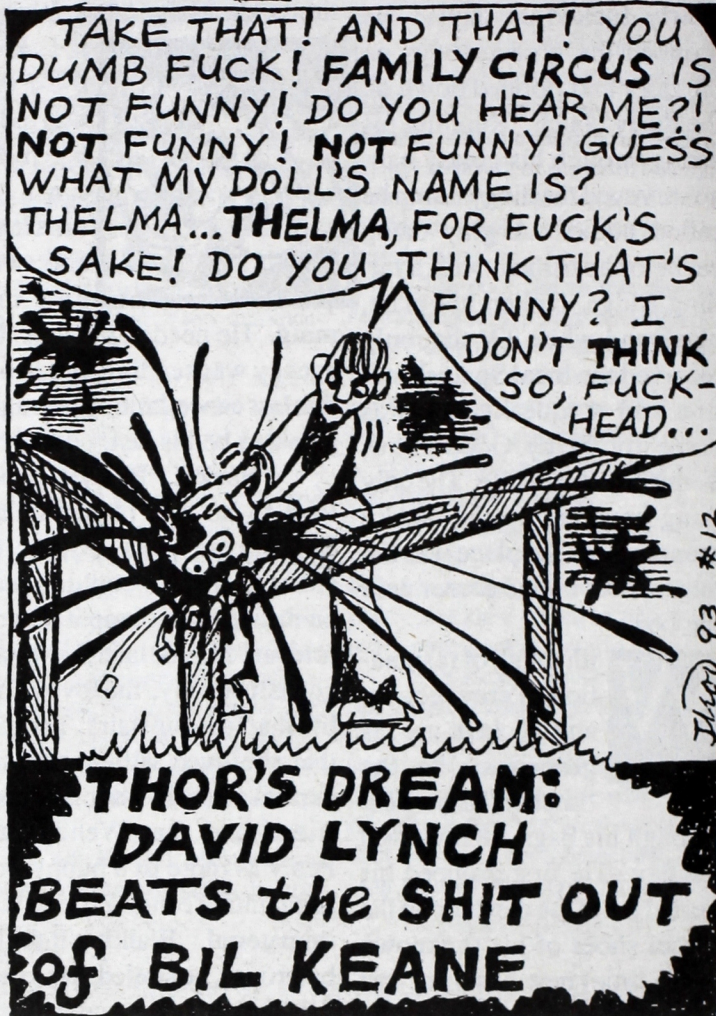

"Fuckin sicko's," McLeod said out loud as if for no particular reason but to hear a voice. He quickly surveyed the people sitting up on stage and focused his attention to the program.

"Well Shirley," began a brunette with shaved legs and big tits, but a very masculine face, "I knew from an early age that I just wasn't like other little boys...."

Something About Fax

This couple is going at it in their room. When they've finished, the guy strips off his condom and tosses it out the window. The girl says, "Don't do that the neighbors will talk". So the guy puts on his pants and runs down to retrieve the condom. When he gets there, he sees this little boy playing with it. The guy says "Hey kid give me the uhh twinkie!" (I mean the kid was only 5 years old!) The kid says "No. I found it" Eventually, the kid sells him the condom for $50. The kid skips into his house with $50 in his hands and his mom asks him where he got the money. The kid replies "Well, I found this Twinkie in the street and this guy bought it from me for $50. But I fooled him, I ate the cream filling!!"

There once was a Panda Bear who went to New York City because he had spent his whole life in the forest. While in New York a prostitute approached him on the street and asked him if he was looking for a good time. Being the naive Panda that he was, he said "sure". The prostitute took him to her room and started to undress. The Panda Bear just laid back on the bed not knowing what was going on, or what was going to happen. The prostitute proceeded to give the Panda everything a Panda could ask for and he returned the favor. Then she went to the sink to wash herself off. While at the sink she the Panda got up and started to leave. She said, "stop! You owe me some money". The Panda politely explained that he did not understand. So the prostitute gave him a dictionary and told him to look up 'prostitute'. He read 'one who trades sex for money'. The Panda kept heading for the door. "Stop, didn't you read what it said?" asked the prostitute. "Yes", replied the Panda, "but look up Panda in the dictionary" he said. The prostitute looked up 'panda' in the dictionary to read; ONE WHO EATS BUSH AND LEAVES.

Ms. Manners - A Year End Perspective

by Judith Fartin

few helpful suggestions.

As spring approaches and students spend more time outdoors, it is helpful to remember that while the snow may be disappearing, vast quantities of sidewalk tulips of the brown, steamy smelly kind will be taking over lawns, sidewalks and paths. Unless one takes treat care to "tiptoe through the tulips", one may very well end up walking around all day wondering why everyone near you seems to smell like dog shit.

The onset of spring also inspires other activities in people who, after a long, cold winter (right, T?) can't wait to shed their skins and partake of the sunlight, or moonlight as the case may be. Ms. Manners would like to remind you that while the burning sensation in your loins is adaptive and normal, it is not socially acceptable to use fire hydrants, trees, teddy bears, whores or human legs to satisfy one's urges. If one is fortunate enough to have a spring-time friend, Ms. Manners strongly recommends that one wears a thin rubber sock to prevent a certain appendage from turning black and falling off.

Ms. Manners wishes you all a safe and polite holiday. Enjoy!

A Summer Handbook

For those of you who will have the pleasure of spending the summer in Sudbury, I have taken the liberty of compiling a list of helpful hints to help you survive.

1. Don't use the washrooms at Moonlight Beach. It's considered gauche not to piss in the lake like everyone else.
2. Don't fall asleep in a wet bathing suit. You'll get a rash in places you didn't know you had.
3. Don't let your dog eat street vendor weinies that have fallen from mouth of a vagrant.
4. Eat street vendor weinies at your own risk.
5. Men with trucker's butt cannot be trusted.
6. While traffic laws may favour cyclists and pedestrians in every other Canadian city, Sudbury drivers don't yield to anything smaller than their own vehicle. Go ahead, bike on the sidewalk, take a bus, just stay the hell off the roads.

MEGALOMANIA

Knocks on the door, with nobody home
The dog has gone out, to seek out his bone
You, larger than life, a devil with breasts
The means to an end, from the very first breath
I gladly would die, if my words should fail
Still, I can't see the cross for all the nails
And you walk on water, while I wear the thorns
You drink my blood, and I swallow scorn
As I lick my wounds, you're speaking in tongues
I wash my hands of what has become
And to your religion, I hardly can pray.
You'll kneel on Sunday, as the dog has his day.

I met a girl, you'll understand,
she showed me roses in the birch trees,

A Young Canadian Caught in the Midst of Airport Hell

Plane travel is not the relaxing, luxurious and exclusive mode of transportation it once was. The moment one makes a reservation for air travel, the nightmare, with all its hidden pitfalls, begins.

So leave your pets at the neighbors and prepare to lose your luggage. Your plane is waiting.

Airports were once a mecca of international intrigue, romance and cultural stimulation. One could find friendly conversation and reliable customer service at every turn. Today airports provide little else than a crash course in insanity.

Hold your luggage firmly or the Lebanese family of 14 may swipe your belongings as you wait for a flight. Waiting is the best entertainment an airport can offer. One may hear various dialects in a collage of race, nationality and personality. High pitch squealing arguments resound in modern airports like outgoing anti-aircraft gun fire. An odor of currie and expensive perfume merge with that of perspiration.

Argument is the staple communication in this mega-people moving area. Every possible issue is arguable. Is the coffee too expensive, why are the bathrooms filthy, should pets be allowed in airport lounges, should Paskistani's monopolize airport security etc, etc.

Airline delays create havoc as people are forced into compromising situations. Compromise is the name of the game when dealing with airport mania. When your plane is delayed your need to rush your airline counter and demand an explanation. The response is typical and is phrased as follows: "We are sorry sir, there is a horrible snow storm in Montreal, your flight should arrive in the next hour."

Meanwhile, the AirCanada counter has announced a further 45 minute delay because of connector problems. My flight was slated to depart from Lester B. Pearson International Airport in Toronto at 5:15 p.m. I, along with my fellow passengers, will have to kill time.

Finding a safe haven to wait for your flight announcement is a difficult task. In a typical waiting lounge you may find an automated piano pounding out classic hits of the 18th Century. This is fine for me as I don't mind automated Mozart. The keys, moving on their own, fascinate children who bang at the piano, disrupting Mozart's computerized brilliance.

Other lounges resemble an attempt by the airports administration to create a multicultural mosaic. Backdrops, surrounding a bar, depict South American children playing in a rural street. Posters of exotic vacation spots such as Morocco, Cancun, Puerto Vallarta and the Ivory Coast blend on the wall. Music varies between samba's, salsa's, tango's and country music. The staff is bored.

My flight has yet to be announced. It is now 7:30 p.m. and I am extremely hungry. This presents a new dilemma...airport food. Airport food goes from one extreme to the next. You may purchase a full course meal for a "reasonable price" including: a 12oz T-bone steak with your choice of potatoe, a Julienne salad, your choice of compulsory beverage and a complimentary dessert consisting of carrot cake all for the "reasonable price" of $35.

The restaurants know they hold a monopoly over all who enter the airport. Where else can you go for a meal if you are unaccustomed to the Toronto area? You can eat for a "reasonable price", which seemed more like gastronomic blackmail, or go for the staple 'french fries' and pop. Don't think the fries and pop are a deal either; you'll pay $5 for this exquisite meal. Needless to say I opted for the latter.

Walking around the airport lead to a sensory overload. Advertisers have taken special interest in cluttering the walls, ceilings and floors with commercial ads. Every annoying neon color has been used to grab your attention and nullify prudent money management.

"Flight 874, destination Montreal and Quebec will be arriving in 30 minutes."

I gaze at my watch and predict my airport schedule; 8:15 p.m., that would make the arrival 8:45 p.m. and by the time I will actually board this illusive flight it will be 9:15 p.m., possibly 9:30 p.m.

I continue to walk around the airport.

"Now announcing the arrival of flight 874 with destinations to Montreal and Quebec, would passengers please report to the AirCanada ticket counter."

May the gods be praised! I shuffle to the AirCanada counter and surrender my tickets. A kind smile is the only comfort I need from the ticket agent before sacrificing my luggage to the system.

Making your way to a three hour delayed flight is soothing in a morbid way. The only satisfaction I feel is the knowledge that I will finally be in the Province of Quebec sometime this evening.

Airport terminals are no place to spend an evening. Airtravel is an uncalculated risk. Technology has not aided airports. Hopefully we will be able to teleport to our destination in the future without going through airport hell.

Well, the year is close to a close and this could be the last Lambda. So I'll have to say so long, good-bye, adieu etc. It's been a good time writing for Lambda and I'd be lying if I told you that I didn't get some kind of sexual perversion out of this too.

Spring is here! I can tell because as the snow melts all the junk everybody threw onto the snow during the year comes out. At my house the neighbour's "missing" cat will magically appear in the yard. Ever see "Pet Cemetery", when they pick up the dead cat off the lawn, yes we got that good velcro sound.

As I look back on the year I see a Murphy's Law type of year for me. Everything that could go wrong goes wrong. Except I had the exponential Murphy's Law, everything goes really wrong. I'm not going to expand on this because it would only depress me & it's taken a lot of booze to feel this good.

I see a lot of people out on bicycles, yes, the weather has been awesome. What I have noticed is how many people ride without helmets, I believe that everybody should wear a brain-bucket. I'm not one to sell out to commercialism, but I was offered a melon protec-

the Four Corners.

I would like to thank everybody who voted for me (10 spoiled ballots). I'm telling you I could have been great (or so I've been told).

In a couple articles before, I talked about human nature (at the Pub mostly) and I'll leave you with one more thing to think about during the summer. In fact, make it an experiment, go to a place that has a lot of doors like a mall or a big school.

Now prop open one of those doors at random. After a while, close this door and open another.

What do you notice? People like to take the path of least resistance, therefore, if there is an open door they will go through it, even if it means walking a few extra steps. I feel all my hanging around malls is justified now.

Well, anyways, (anyways the famous word that really means "Look, I gotta go") I've had a fun year writing to you and I can guarantee that if I don't graduate I'll be back next year to share my thoughts about stuff. Sorry I couldn't be more entertaining but I've got a lot of homework (my excuse for everything right now.)

See you later and remember, it's a small world, but I wouldn't want to paint it.

Real for a moment - lost
Imaginary
Caught in tenses.

It's safe that way.

I think, it had to have been back when I was me,
Then.

But I can't remember then because,
I am me...
Now.

So where are the memory truths?
Where are the childhood chaffing of feet in rubber boots?
Who says time is a measured thing?
Who says an old man is but a paltry thing?

We were all there... or so it seems.
Or maybe it only happens in a child's fevered dream?

Or maybe, it was a story born of a book.
Or maybe it's strangers eyes, that meet in a look.

Or maybe it's a shoebox of old pictures, no names to the faces.
Or may it's the line that an idle finger traces.

Or maybe, everything is joined by strings,
Pawns to the laughing scavenger king.

RUSSIAN PRINCE VODKA

PRESENTS

New Stuff

Russian Prince Vodka wants you to listen to and read about the hottest new music available today. Just $29.50 gets you six different "New Stuff" CD's featuring a minimum of 16 brand new tracks each, and twelve issues of SoundCan magazine, the new pulse of Canadian music. Here's just a few of the bands featured on the current "New Stuff" CD presented by Russian Prince Vodka.

The Lawn

You can't mow it, you can't rake it, but you can rock out to it. It's The Lawn, one of the freshest sounds to grow out of the Toronto club scene. Fronted by the unorthodox slide-guitar stylings and inimitable vocals of Gord Cumming, The Lawn captured their spirited "park bench rock" on Debussy Fields (Hypnotic) last year and have set about harvesting a crop of new fans across the country. The mesmerizing playing of lead-rhythm guitarist Patrick Gregory, the relentless noodling of bassist Richard Gregory and the solid grooves of drummer Lonnie James round out the Lawn's lineup.

Alexander Caplin

At the tender age of 25, this Montreal artist has racked up some pretty impressive musical credentials. After studying jazz, focusing on voice and bass guitar, he lived and worked in Los Angeles, playing with the likes of Chuck Mangione and Santana's Michael Calebero. After a brief stint in London, he moved home and started working on his solo debut, recently released on fre Records. The first single and video, "It's Just The Raid," will surely push him into the international spotlight.

Bachman

Remember the Guess Who? B.T.O.? Of course you do. And you'll be glad to know legendary Canadian rocker Randy Bachman, guitarist of the two legendary bands, is still taking care of business with a new album, Any Road. With guest turns from Neil Young and Margo Timmins (Cowboy Junkies), the new album features some great new material, including the instant classic "Prairie Town." Produced by Chris Wardman, with the solid rhythmic backing of drummer Billy Rea Chapman and bassist Richard Cochrane, Any Road is Bachman doing what he does best: "rock'n roll".

As an added bonus, if you subscribe now through this special campus offer you will be eligible to win:

Étudier en France?

Chère rédactrice,

Lors de la dernière réunion du Sénat de l'Université Laurentienne, les représentants des différentes facultés et associations étudiantes ont approuvé la création d'une bourse de 1 000$ pour un(e) étudiant(e) qui s'inscrit pour l'Université Laurentienne en France.

En tant que le représentant de l'AEF, j'ai transmis notre opposition à l'Université canadienne en France (UCF), et j'ai demandé aux sénateurs de rejeter la bourse. J'aimerais clarifier un point. Je ne suis pas contre la création de bourses pour les étudiant(e)s mais contre l'UCF.

L'Université canadienne en France est un luxe dont l'Université peut s'en passer. Cet argent pourrait être mieux servi ici, à Sudbury, qu'à l'étranger. J'aimerais voir cet argent utilisé pour acheter des livres à la bibliothèque ou pour améliorer les services aux étudiant(e)s.

L'opposition de l'AEF est aussi basé sur le fait que le programme a comme but d'enseigner aux anglophones, la culture française. Il y a une grande différence entre la culture parisienne et la culture canadienne-française. Nous avons une communauté francophone ici, à Sudbury, et l'administration veut envoyer les étudiant(e)s à l'étranger!

Il me semble que les eules raisons que l'administration veut continuer avec ce programme sont pour remplir une page dans son annuaire et pour se venter. Je crois qu'ils devraient investir cet argent dans des secteurs académiques, et ensuite ils pourraient se venter du niveau supérieur de l'éducation ici, à la Laurentienne. Peut-être que nous serons classés plus haut dans Maclean's l'année prochaine.

Le vice-président élu,
Daniel Charbonneau

Réponse à l'article intitulé: "Francophone de la Laurentienne:

Richard Therrien

Vice-président des Communications, Affaires Bilingues (entrant)

Joël A Bombo-Konghauzand, l'auteur de l'article mentionné ci-dessus, a demandé une question brûlante: "L'A.G.E. est-elle une chasse gardée anglophone?" Cher Joël, la culture francophone est une institution qui demande la participation de tous ces membres pour en assurer la continuation. Vous avez mentionné cet aspect dans votre article. Je présume que vous faites parti de l'A.E.F., et, en faisant cette présomption, je dois présumer que vous êtes au courant que l'A.E.F. et l'A.G.E. ont assisté au développement d'une nouvelle organisation intitulée: R.A.É.P.C.F., Regroupement des Associations Étudiantes Poste-secondaires Canadienne-Françaises.

Cette organisation, formée dimanche, le 14 mars 1993, a pour un de ses objectifs la promotion de la culture francophone. C'est une tâche qui n'est jamais facile.

Quel avenir?

J'applaudis l'A.E.F. et Luc Lalonde pour avoir organisé les auditions Juste Pour Rire. Il y a aussi beaucoup d'autres événements francophones dans la région de Sudbury, mais c'est l'A.G.E. que vous questionnez. Premièrement, l'A.G.E. est une organisation bilingue et non francophone. Une personne bilingue ne la vit pas nécessairement. La seule obligation de l'A.G.E. envers ses membres francophones est d'émettre des documents officiels en français.

Mais oui, vous avez raison de dire que l'A.G.E. est une organisation qui semble être unilingue anglophone, mais je crois que c'est une position qui va bientôt changer. Nous commençons avec notre participation dans l'R.A.É.P.C.F., une organisation bilingue-francophone, qui a pour un de ses buts de voir à la création des institutions postesecondaires françaises. De plus, mes discussions avec Luc Lalonde indiquent qu'une coopération entre nos deux organisations vis-à-vis les activités francophones et bilingues est imminente. En conclusion, je me fatigue des commentaires des membres de l'A.E.F. qui passent leur temps à critiquer injustement l'A.G.E.. Si ces individus mettaient autant d'effort dans leur propre organisation, je suis sûr que Luc et Dan seraient très appréciatifs. Les commentaires constructifs sont encouragés surtout des membres francophones ou bilingues de notre association.

Le courrier du pervers

Cher Pervers,

Je vis à l'Université Laurentienne et j'ai rencontré un gars! Sauf que j'ai appris qu'il avait un jumeau pendant qu'ils jouaient à la salle des jeux. Maintenant je ne sais plus avec lequel je veux sortir: Ils paraissent les deux très bien. Mais, je ne sais pas lequel serait le meilleur choix!

Prise entre deux

Cher prise entre deux,

Pourquoi pas les deux en même temps! Ceci pourrait donner un certain défi à ta vie. Ce serait la meilleure façon de découvrir lequel est meilleur! Et si les deux sont bons et qu'ils te désirent aussi, tant mieux pour toi. Et encore une petite chose, non ce n'est pas une bonne affaire de partager avec ses petites amies. Car certains trésors, on les garde pour soi-même.

Le Pervers

Cher Pervers,

J'ai sorti avec une femme plus âgée que moi. Et en faisant l'amour, nous nous sommes emportés à un tel point que nous avons oublié d'utiliser un condom! Sur le coup même j'ai pensé à rien et j'ai bien aimé cela sauf que cette demoiselle ma informé qu'elle avait le SIDA et qu'elle se sentait mal de ne pas me l'avoir dit. Maintenant, je me retrouve dans un beau pétrin et je lui en veux. Et d'une autre façon c'est de ma faute aussi car je n'ai pas fait attention en ne mettant aucun condom.. Devrais-je l'amener en cour pour qu'elle paie pour le traitement que je vais entreprendre? Ou est-ce que je devrais continuer à sortir avec elle tandis que nous l'avons déjà tout le deux et que nous allons mourir éventuellement, donc pourquoi pas ensemble? Puisque le destin veut déjà nous unir pourquoi nous opposer.

Confus

Cher Confus,

Ceci est un cas très sérieux. Ce n'est pas encore cent pourcent sûr que tu aies attrapé le Sida. Tu devrais aller prendre des tests pour voir si tu as le virus. Tes questions sont justifiées mais je pense aussi que pour le moment tu dois être pas mal déprimé et qu'il y a plus de questions que les deux questions, que tu as mentionné dans le texte, qui te trotent dans ta tête.

Si tu aimes la personne, pourquoi pas rester ensemble. Mais si tu ne l'aimes pas, ne prend pas vengeance! Si tu as des problèmes, va en parler plus longuement à une infirmière ou à un docteur.

Le Pervers

Cher Pervers,

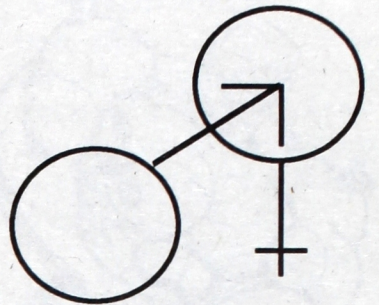

J'ai un pénis de grandeur extraordinaire! Je suis même dans le livre Guinness pour avoir le plus gros et le plus long pénis au monde. Mon problème et tout simplement que les femmes ont peur de faire l'amour avec moi. Elles croient ne pas pouvoir supporter mon "Oscar"! Le tube

Cher tube,

Félicitations, je t'envie pour ta généreuse grandeur... Ton "Oscar" ne devrait pas avoir de problème à trouver un foyer, prends-toi juste un peu plus de temps pour ta partenaire. Bonne chance!

Le Pervers

personne n'a que des yeux pour les autres car moi je ne suis pas assez athlétique pour son goût! Comment dire à cette personne que j'aimerais l'inviter à une de mes soirées d'orgies?

Le miroir

Cher miroir,

Je ne peux pas te répondre car cela est mon problème! J'aimerais juste savoir quel est le con qui a eu le sale culot de publier mes affaires privées. Non mais franchement qui ose se foutre de ma gueule!

Le Pervers aux secrets

Parlons de sexe

Le pervers

Hé j'ai découvert quelque chose de nouveau pour chaque action on a besoin de prendre des protections! Et oui ces petites choses en caoutchouc qui ne sont pas toujours si agréables.

Mais si vous savez toujours si agréable savez-vous on les gonfle ces petites les couleurs, formes et a deux façons de gonfler soit on les gonfle avec son alors on les met par-dessus qu'ils ne sont pas vous aussi comités ballons de toute même odeurs! Il y ces petites choses propre souffle ou un objet assez dur!

Des ballons de toutes les couleurs

Quand on veut les souffler il faut être assez courageux! Puisque les fabricants de ballons ne connaissent pas la grandeur de votre bouche, ils produisent une grandeur qui devrait convenir à tout le monde. Alors imaginez-vous en train d'essayer de gonfler quelque chose qui est deux fois plus grand que votre bouche. Bonne chance mes amis!

Mais il faut avouer que c'est toujours plus passionnant de le filer, glisser, étendre ou étirer au-dessus d'un objet bien gonflé déjà. O.K. je suis d'accord, il faut d'abord trouver cet objet rare et précieux! Mais quand vous l'avez trouvé faites sûr de lui refiler ce petit ballon.

Oui, oui je sais ils problèmes comme: le ballon est trop grand (ne pas! Ou ne surestimez pas rare!), trop petit (non, non les ballons de Ken, le mari a plus assez de liquide pour glisse jusqu'au bout.

Comment gonfler un ballon?

parfois il y a des petits ballons se déchire, le vous surestimez la valeur de cet objet il ne faut pas acheter de Barbie! ou il n'y que le petit ballon

La meilleure solution est d'acheter toute une collection. Je suis sûr que vous allez les gonfler un jour ou l'autre! Le choix est toujours un plus. Non bien sûr vous n'avez pas besoin de tout acheter les mêmes. Vous pouvez acheter différentes couleurs, différents goûts et bien d'autres choses! Je vous en prie vérifiez juste un peu la qualité.

Oh, un petit détail encore, si vous achetez des ballons avec des odeurs de chocolat ou de la fraise... s'il vous plaît ne mordez pas dedans! Avec tous les petits ballons installés, vous pourrez commencer à jouer aux "legos". Je sais, tout le monde connaît ce jeu! Mais savez-vous à quel point il est instructif?

Ah non, ce ne vous faire un dessin. petits morceaux de "lédent rien d'autre que sur l'autre. N'est-ce pas érotique en même Vous pouvez rentes formes, et tout morceaux de différentes leurs. Il y a tellement de possibilités! Cela doit être exploité, vous pouvez développer un chef-d'oeuvre avec toutes ces idées originales qui trotent dans votre tête!

Les legos, un jeu d'enfance.

N'ayez crainte, rien ne peut aller mal. Avec les "legos" vous pouvez apprendre bien des choses sans risquer quoique que ce soit! Sinon pensez-vous que nos parents nous auraient laissé jouer avec un jeu considéré comme une mauvaise chose? Quand vous pensez ou réalisez que vos idées s'achèvent ou deviennent rares, ne vous en faites pas.

Trouvez simplement quelqu'un qui pourrait vous fournir des idées pendant votre lacune. Donc joignez-vous au gonflage de petits ballons et à la construction de petits "legos" de toutes les couleurs. Amusez-vous bien!

Annual Tikka-Ski Sunny Success!

This past Saturday at 3 pm, a number of people took part in the annual Kari Tikka Beer & Ski. Where it was held, is still a mystery. The setting was incredible. The sun was out, the temperature reached 12 deg C, and there was snow on the ground. Thanks go out to the Sun God! It was a great day for everyone, and every person who participated has some gash or scrapes to remember it by. Here's to crystalline snow!

Six teams took part this year, and everyone proved that they were truly iron-men. Kevin Sullivan especially comes to mind when I think of people who endured the afternoon. As George Thorogood was singing that afternoon, Kevin is indeed "Bad to the Bone." We all saw his knee cap and it looked pretty bad. Stephen Ferrari, Erik Labrosse, and Ian Graham all deserved credit for maintaining their technique during the day. High speed telmark turns off that hill after 7 or 8 beer is downright impressive. Ferrari also deserves credit for that belly flip, none of us had the opportunity to witness. However, I think everybody accepted item #1a, the chest wound, as sufficient evidence.

Another group of people that deserves special attention are the days hound dogs. Tim McLees, Scott Lemon, and Graham all did a little howling Saturday, but I'm sure they were not alone, just a little more conspicuous. You guys definitely showed your strength Saturday, and to that I say AWOOO-OO!

The winners of the day comprised of two of the hound dogs, Ian, the Newfie, Graham and Scott Lemon. The boys managed to stifle the projection of their gastric contents enough to soundly beat the competition. They both received an original colour print by a successful local artist for their effort. (Colour photocopy of a doodle.) Scott and Ian, you truly know the meaning of blood, sweat and tears, or is that beers. Congratulations and keep howling.

Special thanks go out to Pam for teaming up with Tim McLees at such short notice. You looked great! Also, thanks go out to Eric Finstad, celebrity photographer, and to the lovely ladies who worked the feeding table. Lori and Suzanne, we appreciate your help, without you, the day would have been much more hectic. To Wendy, I'm sorry you missed the event you "Stuck In The Mud" (Joke).

Anyways, this is Jacko signing off for the year, leaving you with the reminders. 1. Support L.U. Nordic Ski Teams, 2. Take part in next year's Tikka Ski (*same place & time), and 3. Go hard or go home! I'm outta here.
